Don't Let Summer BURN Your Budget

The long sunny days of summer have a way of flying by, and if you're not careful, they can whittle down your budget just as fast. Avoid a budget burnout by watching for these budget-busters.

- ★ Day camps. Rather than resorting to expensive day camps for the kids, check with your local library or city's park and recreation department for free or low-cost programs available for children.
- ★ Extra driving. Park visits, beach days, and zoo days have a way of guzzling up your gas. Consider limiting day trips to a couple times a week, or parking in a central location and walking from there.
- ★ Lack of planning. Busy summer days can make it tempting to give meal planning a break, which can mean last-minute trips to the store, or extra eating out. Consider foods that are easy to prepare and fun to eat, including meats and vegetables to grill.
- ★ Keeping things cool. Consider ways to reduce the length of time your air conditioner runs, such as opening windows at night, using fans, and keeping blinds closed on hot sunny days.
- ★ Restocking summer clothes. Be sure to shop your own closet before heading out for new clothes for the new season. If you still need new clothes for the season, consider classic items that remain trendy and are more likely to remain evergreen from summer to summer.
- ★ Summer gear. Tents, coolers, hammocks, lawn furniture—they all sound tempting for summer, but consider how much you'll use each new item versus how necessary it is to have a new one.
- ★ Vacations. There's nothing wrong with a great summer vacation, but if it forces you to use credit, consider making smaller, less expensive plans and start saving up for bigger plans for next year.
